Introduction

Akwa Ibom State ranked 4th on the human development index published by the United Nations Development Programmes, UNDP in 2016. Akwa Ibom according to the 2006 census has an estimated population of 5, 482, 177 million people, the State occupies a land mass of 8, 412 kilometers and it borders Abia, Rivers and Cross Rivers States. The state has 31 Local Government Areas and further divided into 329 political wards.

As one of the largest producers of crude oil, Akwa Ibom should be ranked high on the scale of human development and socio-economic performance but the economic outlook for the state according to the Nigeria Bureau of Statistics, NBS 2018 report on unemployment is staggering. The NBS reports an unemployment rate of 37.7 percent in third quarter of 2018. It was the highest reported unemployment rate in the country.

The unemployment and poverty level of the state was concentrated in rural communities; especially among women and was reflected in the low quality of living, unequal access to opportunities, healthcare services, education, and lack of basic development infrastructures such as schools, health centres, potable water and access roads. In 2007, ActionAid Nigeria along with its local implementing partner in Akwa Ibom State; Women United for Economic Empowerment and Applicants Welfare and National Development Centre (AWANDEC) kicked off the Local Rights Programme to scale up the participation and inclusion of women, children and communities. In 2011, the African Human Development Centre became the new partner for the programme.

The programme commenced in 4 of the 31 local government areas of the state and in 14 communities spread across the selected Local Governments. The LRP in Akwa Ibom focused on 4 main pillars:

The milestone achieved within the period of the programme was a life changing experience for the communities and the implementing partners. A field visit to some of the communities where the programme is being implemented reveals comparative level of impact and achievement of the programme goals.

Women's political awareness and social consciousness has increased, in communities where women were abused and not included in community decision making, there are reports of better inclusion and integration of women in decision making. The programme reports two women who made it to the leadership positions in their village council as well as Local Government level.

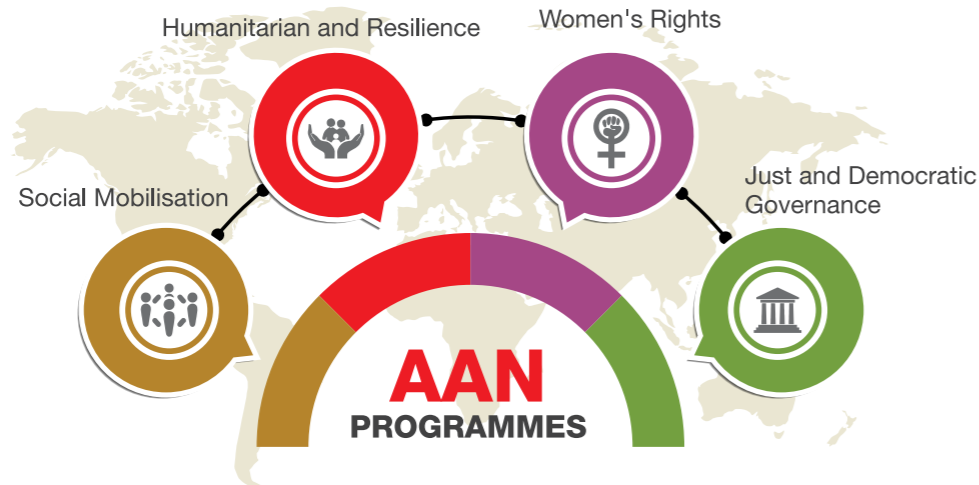

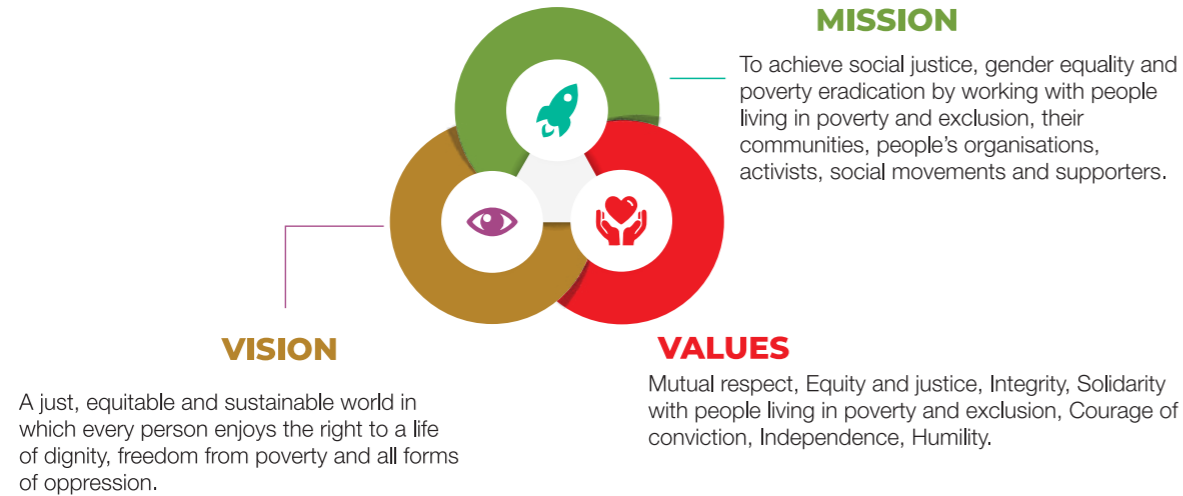

In all the communities, women formed groups and advocacy clusters to champion their rights at the traditional council level as well as the local government level; these groups have fostered unity among the women and have enhanced their self-image and confidence. "The network of women peer education in the communities is now a movement, it started in 4 communities, it is now extending to 10 other communities, even communities which were not part of the programme are asking for support to form the network of women peer education groups" said Professor Gabriel Umoh, founder and Executive Director, African Human Development Centre.

Health centres was constructed in Ikot Unya, a community which reported high infant and maternal mortality because of the lack of health centre for women, especially pregnant women and sick children in the community.

The LRP has also improved the capacity of the implementing partners by helping them build stronger systems AHDC; now have improved finance and Human Resource Policies including gender, anti-sexual harassment, child protection policies. All these have helped us develop AHDC into a strong organisation.

OUR VISION, MISSION AND VALUES

The Local Rights Programme (LRP) Overview

ActionAid (AA) started work in Nigeria in 2000 and programmes in the areas of Education, Food and Agriculture, Just and Democratic Governance, Human Security in Conflict and Emergencies, Health, and Women's Rights: working with Non-Governmental Organisations (NGOs) and Community-Based Organisations (CBOs) at the community, state and national levels through participatory approaches. It is focused on strengthening the movement against poverty through alliance and coalition building activities targeted at building capacity of CSOs and Government in enhancing civil participation and addressing policy issues.

In 2002, ActionAid Nigeria (AAN) decided to move beyond the single theme intervention dependent on donor funding and introduced the child sponsorship mechanism which is an AAN fundraising mechanism to support its development work in its thematic areas. Under this mechanism, a sponsor from UK and Italy or other Alliance Partner Country is linked to a child in the community and a bond is built between both which leads to improvements in the child's community and for his/her family's benefit. This long-term integrated development programme is called the Local Rights Programme (LRP) which is currently being implemented in 18 states, with Ondo, Bauchi, and Akwa-Ibom scheduled to phase out after benefiting from the programme for almost two decades.

LRP was established to achieve ActionAid's vision and mission of working with poor and excluded people. It was known as Partnership Against Poverty (PAP) until 2012 when the new structure of ActionAid Nigeria was established. The programme is now known as Partnerships and Local Rights Programme.

The main objective of LRP is to improve the socio-economic status of poor women, men and children in LRP states by mobilising communities and building their capacities to implement people centered development programmes using the Human Rights Based Approach to programming. This is done through a three-pronged approach; Empowering grassroots community through rights consciousness and supporting locally initiated projects, capacity building of local institutions and supporting policy and advocacy initiatives that ensure that the voices of people living in poverty are listened to and their rights respected.

African Human Development Centre (AHDC), the state-based partner implemented the LRP in Akwa Ibom with funding from ActionAid. The programme implementation focused on basic education, agriculture, women's rights, health, governance, and human security in emergencies. Since inception, the programme has reached over 10,080 women and 17,280 children through different activities. The intervention has also reached over 105 persons with disabilities.

Over the years, through capacity building by ActionAid and AHDC, advocacy and engagement of duty bearers by the communities, the top 10 key achievements include but are not limited to:

10 KEY ACHIEVEMENTS IN THE LAST 10 YEARS

- Over 500 women participate in the Women Peer Education Programme which have now developed to Network of Women Peer Educators of Nigeria (NEWPEN). The empowerment from this network has led to the appointment of 5 women to serve in leadership capacity such as LGA supervisory councillor, ward executive and members of village council.
- The practice of Agroecology Model Farming pave way for women who now have access to land and control over their resources.
- 50 young women graduate from skill acquisition centres in Ikot Udobia and Nkana communities with tailoring skills. Some now own their fashion and designing shops, employed other young women and are able to support their families with the proceed they make from their businesses.

- 4
Victims of Sexual Abuse and Teenage Pregnancy who dropped out of school and ostracised by their parents have been reintegrated to their families and supported to go back to school. They now attend school on regular basis and doing very well in their exams.

- 5
Communities utilise their rights in making demands for teachers to be posted to the community school. This has led to the posting of 11 additional teachers to 2 communities Ikot Umiang Ede and Iwo Etor primary schools. The pupils are no longer merged into one class as before. The pupils are better taught, and academic performance have improved.

- 6
40 youths formed into cooperatives and supported with enterprise training and starter pack to venture into Agribusiness. The youths now own their individual businesses and can cater for themselves this has also reduced unemployment and theft in the communities.

- 7
Construction of school block and provision of basic textbooks, desks equipment to Ikot Mfon, Iwo Etor and Ikot Akama primary schools have increased access to education and improved enrolment.

- 8
Village Heads in Nkana and Ndon Utim communities support the practice of agroecology and elimination of bush burning. Farmers who practice Agroecology in these communities have now witnessed increased crop yield and improved income.

- 4
Counselling session to over 900 in-school and out-of-school youths have improved their self-esteem to maximise their potentials. This has increased their understanding on educational, vocational and social information needed to make wise choices for their career as well as equip them with skills to make firm decisions about job, future educational pursuit and career prospect.

- 1
Women in LRP communities learn how to make organic manure and are playing active role in increasing food production, there is a clear departure from subsistence farming to producing food for commercial sale. This has also led to improving their living standard and livelihoods.

A key learning is that poverty eradication intervention requires participatory development effort involving communities, CSOs, Government both at local and state levels. ActionAid hopes that communities and Government will continue to leverage on the capacity strengthening interventions provided throughout the lifecycle of the programme to sustain the programme gains and create the change they want to see in their lives and communities in Akwa Ibom State.

10 YEARS OF TRANSFORMATIVE & IMPACTFUL PARTNERSHIP

For us in African Human Development Centre (AHDC), partnering with ActionAid to implement Local Rights Programme has been an exciting and fulfilling experience. For the 10 years we implemented the Local Rights Programme (LRP), we have expanded our reach in many fronts: we supported integrated development of over 5000 children in 14 communities across 4 local Government Areas of Akwa Ibom State through the Child Sponsorship activities; enhanced communities' access to quality healthcare; education; water, sanitation and hygiene. We have empowered women and youths with livelihood opportunities and skills. Above all, we have equipped the communities with the skills to engage the duty bearers at all levels for their rights thus enhancing gender-responsive and inclusive governance from the community level through to other tiers of governments. We now have strong community structures such as Reflection and Action, Women Peer Education groups, Youth Accountability Cells, Project Management Committees, School-based Management Committees to sustain developments in the communities. It is on record that women are now an integral part of decision-making and political platforms in communities where we work. Inclusive Forum for Accountable Society (IFAS) is playing important role in bringing about interface of community, civil society, organised private sector and government for inclusive governance and sustainable livelihoods to communities.

The parting of good friends is always with mixed feelings. This is the way we in AHDC feel with the phasing out of the LRP in Akwa Ibom State. Its end is an emotional thing for us. Our consolation is that our capacity has been developed through this partnership to look up to the future with confidence. The belief that the strong organisation ActionAid has made us (AHDC) will bring us more partnership opportunities for the great work of community development we are so passionate about. From all of us in AHDC, we say, THANK YOU, ACTIONAID!

SHATTERING STIGMA

Veronica Okon Ekong, 52 recounts “about 2 decades ago, women from Nkana community were restricted in all matters concerning inclusion and participation. We were like people imprisoned; on a particular festival of the masquerades, women were not allowed to come outside the whole day; they restricted the movement of all the women and the girls to their houses. Also If a woman offends her husband, the man can suspend the woman for 3 months; you will have to send people to beg him before he takes you back. It was like everything was against us” Veronica said, looking begrudged.

In the community's council, where important decisions are made, no woman was appointed to membership of the council, it is made up of men and one male youth representative., the women and the girls were not represented.

This practice continued unchallenged until sometime in 2007 when ActionAid launched the Local Rights Programmes, executed through its initial partner in Akwa Ibom State and later the current partner ; the African Human Development Centre (AHDC).

The programme triggered an awakening in the women of Nkana community. Veronica who had been a survivor of domestic violence, mobilised other women in the community to make demands for inclusion and an end to all forms of gender discrimination meted against women in the community. Veronica and the women applied their first lesson on advocacy, and it worked: “We approached the men in the village council and told them we want to be part of development in the community, we told them we want to be represented in the council, we made several other demands, and they were all granted” she enthused.

The women pressed on to form the Nkana Women Association with clusters on each of the 9 streets of the community. About 20 to 25 women were represented in each cluster. “At these meetings we educate women on all the contents of the manual ActionAid developed for us, we talk about hygiene, sanitation, how to dress, and how to communicate with people. Even the men are proud of what we do now” said Veronica who is the leader of the group.

“I never believed I could speak bold, I never believed I can reach this level, now I can speak in the presence of the Governor.

Veronica is the first female ward leader in her political party, a position she said would not have been possible without her capacity been built through the LRP: “I am today the first ward women leader in Etinan Local Government, it is something that would not have been possible without the training and exposure we received from ActionAid and the African Human Development Centre” Veronica affirms.

MOTHERHOOD DIGNIFIED

Ikot Unya community has an estimated population of 2500 persons. It is tough accessing the community; the roads are narrow and bumpy, like a lonely house docked in the middle of a thick forest, its surrounding is cool, breezy, and calm.

But not its people; they are tucked in the past; the community had no single health care centre, when they get ill, they run to the herbalist who makes concoction and hopes it heals them of any ailment. When the women are pregnant, they seek the help of the traditional birth attendant.

Uduak Ishmael Pius, 36, a nursing mother, who had patronised the traditional birth attendants for delivery of 5 of her 6 children. “All we know here is the traditional birth attendant. Anytime we get pregnant, we run to the birth attendant with a bottle of 'hot' drink (local gin) and 2,500 Naira for registration, if we complain of anything, the woman in charge will give us herbs, sometimes it works, sometimes it does not work.”

Uduak recalled: “Last year, my sister in-law went to give birth at the traditional birth attendant place, she suffered complications, it was in the middle of the night, she spent about 6 hours in labour, she gave birth to the child but couldn't make it” Uduak's late sister in-law, like many women in the community who died during pregnancy were victim of the unprofessionalism of the unregistered birth attendants.

Uduak took a piercing look at her 6 weeks old child; “This my child was born here; she is lucky, and we didn't spend money as we used to spend so much money at the local birth attendant place.” Uduak gave birth in the first health centre in the community supported by ActionAid. It is an entirely new experience and cost saving: “I was not charged any amount when I delivered this baby, the place is also clean, not like the other place (the traditional birth attendant home) where they put us on a cold floor” Uduak said it was a dignifying experience giving birth for the first time in a health centre with the assistance of a trained nurse.

It is also saving the men cost: “We know that the traditional birth places are quack, so we encourage our women to attend the clinic, we are also happy because we save money that would have been used for the local birth attendants for caring for the child because in this clinic we don't pay when our women give birth here” Okon Brownson Udoh, a father and member of the community said.

THE START OF SOMETHING GOOD

WE NOW HAVE A LAW AGAINST RAPE OFFENDERS IN IKOT AKAMA COMMUNITY

Benson Ofon, a member of the Ikot Akama village council, a community of about 800 inhabitants recalls how there was previously no school and health centre in the community. Parents had to withdraw their wards from school when reports of rape and theft on the bush path to school became a regular occurrence. It was a hard choice sending children to the neighboring community where they trekked 2 hours to school and back.

Peace Basse, 18 (not real name), was in Junior Secondary School when she was raped. Her parents sent her out of the house and withdrew her from school. Following this, Ofon who is the LRP contact person in the community reached out to AHDC and urged for an intervention.

“We went to the parents to beg them, they refused initially, we assured them that she will be offered some scholarships like buying of books and uniform if they would allow the child go back to school. Then they accepted” said Ofon.

“During our engagement with the community council and a team from ActionAid and AHDC, we recommended that the constituted village council institute a strict penalty for rape offenders. We even recommended that parents of the man or boy who rapes anyone will be excommunicated from the community. It is now a law in this community, we have a law for rape offenders” Ofon said: “no such law existed before, and the impact has seen a complete stop to rape incidences in this community”.

AKWA IBOM LRP ACTIVITIES SNAPSHOT

MOBILISING WOMEN FOR CHANGE

Women were subjected to all forms of abuse in Ikot Umiang Ede community. Theresa Gabriel Ekanem, 48, points to the root cause of domestic violence in her community: “One of the things I observed was that men beat their wives and disrespect them because most times, they assume they do not support the family, women who were completely dependent on their husbands were subjects of abuse” .

One of the forms of right denial was non - inclusion of women in the village council: “women were seen as if we have nothing to offer” Things changed when ActionAid and AHDC launched the LRP campaign in the community.

“The first thing is that we realised that we had power to make changes. When we began to learn from the manual given to us by ActionAid, it was an eye- opener to us” Theresa said.

They were emboldened by their new knowledge; the women peer education group approached the village council and demanded an inclusion into the meeting. The request was granted. The village council asked the women to nominate a representative; Theresa was nominated into the council.

“When the village council allowed women representation, it was a big day for all of us here, that decision gave us boldness to talk, make contributions and add our voices to the development of the community, today nothing happens in this community without our involvement” Theresa further stressed.

As they settled into the realisation of the power of making demands through advocacy, the women made a move to test their advocacy at the local government: “One of the problems we have here is that there are inadequate teachers in our school, we only have 2 teachers in the entire primary school, so we decided to mobilise women to the village council meeting to request their intervention, we also wrote letters and visited the local government, as a result 14 teachers were posted to the school in our community” she said.

“When I saw how women were maltreated, I decided that I would make a change. One day, I learnt from the peer education manual that I can hold political position, I looked at myself and said, I will give it a try, I got into politics and today I can tell you that I am the Vice Chairperson in my ward” Theresa said with a glee and a pinch of confidence.

ENDEMIC TEENAGE PREGNANCY ENDS

Daniel William, 33 is the facilitator of the club. He tells how the club membership is on the rise: “Since we started this Sexual and Reproductive Health club, we have witnessed interest from teenagers in this community and other communities., some parents send us their children because they know that we communicate issues of sex education in a way the parents may not be comfortable to communicate with their wards.”

The Sexual and Reproductive Health club has also gone onto digital platforms: “We discovered that we needed to reach more young people from different communities and even around the world, because these issues are so important, we decided to open a Facebook fan page, where we post and share our activities. We can tell you now with confidence that our young girls are no longer getting unwanted pregnancy like it used to be” William said.

“About 15 years ago, when you walk into this community, you will see children of ages 10- to 15 years already pregnant. Some of them were pregnant for the second time” said Peace Theresa Gabriel, 29.

Peace is a peer educator for the Sexual and Reproductive Health Club in the community, a weekly club, where teenagers openly discuss issues of sexual reproductive health. Peace admits some of the girls learn about menstrual hygiene and self-esteem for the first time in the club: “We discovered that the high rate of pregnancy at that time was as a result of lack of awareness, the girls were not aware about their body and the boys too do not know how to channel their sexual desires” Peace said.

The result of teenage /unwanted pregnancy negatively impacted on education of the girls; when the girls get pregnant, they withdraw from school and never return. “We decided to start a campaign to address this. We visited the parents of the girls, we also visited the village council to assist in convincing the girls and their parents to send them back to school,” said Peace.

IMPROVED SCHOOL ENROLLMENT INCREASED ENROLMENT, RETENTION AND COMPLETION OF EDUCATION

Apostolic Central School, Iwo Etor serves pupils from 3 communities. It is the only public primary school in the community. As of 2015, the school population was about 800, and with just 2 blocks of classrooms.

Pupils sat on the floor to learn; the classroom roofs were leaking, and the windows were broken. The deplorable condition of the school was de-motivating for the pupils and their parents.

Grace Young William, a community member and former teacher hints at the drop in the level of concentration and academic performance of the pupils, with morale of the teachers also dropping as a result of the condition of the school. “As a community member, I observed that this school was falling apart, many parents withdrew their children for fear that the building might one day collapse on the children” Grace said.

She recounts how thunderstorm blew off the roof of the classroom and injured learners; the outcome was mass withdrawal from the school: “There was a time, it rained so much, the wind blew off the roof in one of the classes, and the roof fell on one of the children and injured him. We had to quickly rush him to the hospital. The following day, a lot of the pupils did not come to school” she said.

Owing to this situation ActionAid through its partner AHDC supported the construction of 2 blocks of classrooms with furniture. This has improved the school enrollment, retention and completion of education with current enrollment jumping to 1,323 pupils.

INSTITUTIONALISED CHANGES

When the Local Rights Programme was launched in Akwa Ibom State, the State's Ministry of Economic Development and Ibom Deep Sea Port became one of the institutional partners of the programme. The intent was to enable full participation of Government and the integration of a system of transparency, accountability, and inclusion of the interest of rural communities in the budgeting process.

Otobong Peter, Director, Monitoring and Evaluation at the ministry hints of an adjustment in the budgeting process of the state as a result of the engagement with ActionAid and AHDC. Peter admits that there has been a shift to better budgeting systems which capture the needs of people in rural communities.

He said: "We have introduced what we call; The Citizens Budget, it was after one of the trainings on budgeting, we developed a memo and sent it for approval. The approval for the Citizens Budget was given by the State's council and we have been executing it since then" Peter said.

The Citizens Budget is a system of budgeting that captures the need and involves the participation of communities in the state's budgetary processes. "We meet the people from the rural areas, we meet representatives of the traditional people and ask them to submit input into the budgeting process" Peter further explained: "We have the Citizens Budget committee made up of people who are physically challenged, representatives of women groups, civil society and representatives of the traditional and local authorities" said the Director of Monitoring and Evaluation.

In the 2021 budget, an estimate of businesses and households most affected by COVID-19 were captured for several forms of intervention and government support.

"I have also learnt a lot of things since my engagement with ActionAid and AHDC and I try to execute what I learn immediately, for example the Citizens Budget was as a result of a memo we submitted, and it was an outcome of training from ActionAid" he said.
